great inducement to support the appeal-that its success will avert conscription. In his first proclamation Lord French said that he intended to ask for voluntary recruits "in the hope that, without resort . recruits "in the hope that, without resort to compulsion," Ireland's military contribution might be brought up to its proper strength. The present proclamation makes no reference to conscription, but nobody can misread its silence. Mr. Bonar Law said yesterday in Parliament that anybody who should suppose that conscription for Ireland had been dropped would be mistaken. Indeed, if Lord French's offer fails, conscription will be inevitable. Failure would prove to the whole world that Ireland had refused to "save her face" on riduculously easy terms, and that she is utterly deaf to the voice of duty and patriotism. VOLUNTARY RECRUITING IN

LORD LIEUTENANT'S PROCLAMATION.

IRELAND.

The offer we make is that Ireland should voluntarily furnish the number of men required to establish an equitable ratio when compared with all other parts of the Empire. ii. In order to establish that ratio Ireland can fairly be asked to raise 50,000 recruits before October 1st to replenish the Irish Divisions in the field, and after that date to raise 2,000 to 3,000 recruits per | st month in order to maintain those Divisions. That is what we ask

Ireland to do. We wish to make it quite clear to everyone that there is no intention to disturb farming interests or food production, or to do anything which would hamper or curtail the essential industry of the country. It is not expected that many of the rural population will be available for military purposes. The Government look almost entirely to the large number of young men in the towns, far greater than is required to carry on ordinary retail trade, to furnish the necessary contingent. IV. As was done in England, Scotland, and Wales, we propose first to call upon the younger men and those who can best be spared to come forward to fight for their motherland.

The limit of age in the present appeal is, therefore, fixed at 18 to 27.

Given at His Majesty's Castle of Dublin, this third day of June, one thousand this nine hundred and eighteen.

THE AMERICAN MARKET

Secure Your Spraying Materials

Of ordinary farm crops, the potato is the most productive from the food point of view. An acre of average land in potatoes will produce sufficient food for 200 people for a week, or a whole family of four people for more than a year. In order to safeguard and increase the yield from this year's crop, it is of the utmost importance that

been strikingly demonstrated throughout the country for many years. Blight has already made its appearance. Delay in placing orders for supplies of materials and machines may lead to disappointment later.
